Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Summary of the Principal Chinese Treatises: Upon the Culture of the Mulberry and the Rearing of Silk Worms The attention of the American People having been attracted for several years to the culture of silk, with all its attendant advantages, both to individuals and as a source of national wealth, the following compilation, from Chinese authors, made by authority of the French Government, it is hoped will prove interesting, and not entirely unprofitable, to the yet incipient serigene art in the United States. Notwithstanding the superiority of the French in the arts and sciences, and length of time which has elapsed since the introduction of the manufacture of silk into France, (in the reign of Francis I, ) the fact, of the great superiority of the Chinese culture is frankly admitted by M. Camille Beauvais, the gentleman at whose instance the French Minister directed this Translation to be made from the Chinese works. Such is the strength of his testimony on one point, that he asserts, the Chinese lose in the rearing scarcely one per cent. of their worms, whereas the French lose more than fifty ! So important is silk to the civilized nations of the globe, so many and various are the fabrics wrought from this beautiful material, so familiarly known, and of such universal consumption, that the manner of its production cannot fail to be a subject of earnest inquiry and of interesting investigation to our enterprising citizens. It is well calculated to excite surprise and astonishment, that the gorgeous velvet, the rich brocade, the transparent gauze, and the delicate blonde, should all have their origin from the labors of an apparently...
