Excerpt: . . . father shield: All, fired with noble erruilation, strive, And with a storm of darts to distance drive The Trojan chief; who held at bay, from far On his Vulcanian orb sustained the war. Eneas thus oerwhelnd on every side, Their first assault undaunted did abide, And thus to Lausus, loud with friendly thrcatning cryd: Why wilt thou rush to certain death, and rage In rash attempts beyond thy tender age, Bctrayd by pious love i a--And afterwards: He grievd, he wept; the sight an image brought Of his own filial love; a sadly pleasing thought. But beside the outlines of the posture, the design of the picture comprehends in the next place the forms of faces, which are to be different; and so in a poem or a play must the several characters of the persons be distinguished from each other. I knew a...
